"WAR" IN TORONTO

The Toronto Police Commissioners have recently passed a regulation prohibiting the use of any language other than English at public gatherings in Toronto. The first application of the new rule was made at a Communist meeting. When a certain speaker attempted to harangue in Yiddish he was promptly placed under arrest. The gathering was finally dispersed by the use of a tear gas bomb, which made further speaking, in any language, impossible. Notwithstanding the disclaimer of responsibility by the Chief of Police, the impression prevails that it was the police which brought into play the weapon of the tear bomb.

In a subsequent interview, the Chief of Police indicated that the new rule will be invoked only against Communist meetings in order to prevent the cloaking of Communist propaganda by dialects which are unintelligible to the police. It is a case of warfare against Communism. There is no antagonism against foreign languages. But if the realities of the war situation demand the abrogation of civil rights, then the war requirements prevail.

In supporting the stand of the police the Toronto press has seized upon the Chief's dictum that he is out to deal with a situation rather than with theories of human rights, and have found in it the warrant for his actions. Realities are more important than ideals. When the two happen to clash the ideals must give way.

It is our purpose to examine some of the implications of this proposition. At the outset, however, we wish to make it clear, that we are not concerned with the merits of Communism. As a matter of fact we regard Communism as a purely domestic affair in Russia. We fail to see where it has any real bearing on life in Canada. There are a handful of neurotic individuals who make communistic gestures, but they are too few, and by nature too much given to mouthing to be effectual, or to deserve serious consideration.

Well, in Toronto, we are told that a war has been declared against the so called Communists. A war forsooth! Who has declared this war? No doubt in this warfare, the police are our militia. Now it is known that in no country (except in pre-war Germany) has the army a say in the making or unmaking of wars. There is a government which enjoys the prerogative of determining the relationship between itself and other bodies. The Toronto Police Commissioners, who might correspond to a military staff, have decided to wage a war against Communists. Have they received authority from any of our legally constituted governmental bodies? As far as we know the Communist party is a legal entity in Canada. We do not know which of our governmental bodies has the power to determine the legality of the party's existence, but obviously it would be necessary to have the governmental body, which has jurisdiction in the matter, decide first before the military authorities commence their operations. It is a very dangerous thing to have the militia or the police usurp legislative powers in a free country.

Next let us consider the nature of the rights which are being infringed upon in the present instance. We must not forget that even in real wars there are certain rights which are considered inalienable and indefeasible, and civilized countries are bound to observe international codes, which protect them.

RELIGIOUS DISCRIMINATION IN IMMIGRATION

Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

The recent reply of the presidents of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways to the Immigration Department defending the railroads' immigration work contained some startling statements of religious discrimination which should not go by unchallenged. According to the agreement with the Government the railroads were empowered to bring in from non-preferred countries domestic and agricultural labourers. According to the issued statements, Hebrews were excluded from the agreement between the government and the railroads. Inasmuch as this is published in an authoritative document, we do not question its accuracy. The implication is that the Canadian government assented to a policy of religious discrimination with respect to immigrants. That such a policy is out of keeping with the finest ideals of Canadianism is unquestionable. That such a policy violates the fundamentals of British traditions is also evident. Why did the government give its sanction to an agreement which puts a religious test on certain immigrants.

Religious discrimination, we know, exists in Canada among some private employers. That is deplorable. But it has no right to exist in a government which was elected by all creeds, and which is to administer to their needs in impartial fashion. We ask an explanation from the government in this matter.

A JEWISH INTERNE AT THE GENERAL HOSPITAL

Sometime ago, in the columns of the Canadian Jewish Review, we protested against the apparent exclusion of Jewish medical students from interneship at local hospitals. We are now happy to record that the General Hospital has appointed a brilliant Jewish student of the University of Toronto (He is to graduate this June) to an interneship for the ensuing year. We congratulate the hospital on the appointment, and we feel certain the new interne will make good. We hope that other hospitals will follow the lead set by the Toronto General. Religious prejudice should have no place in the field of service or of science.

THE GOOSE AND THE GOLDEN EGGS

Each week another representative of some good cause comes to Toronto to solicit funds. In our mind, we can enumerate a number of such individuals. Mrs. Frischman came to collect funds to publish the works of her well-known husband. From the Morgenrot, a trade school in Roumania, came Mr. Gillischensky. To secure aid for the Palestinian Teachers' College came the well-known Yellin. Mr. Landau, of New York, came to urge the just claims of the Jewish Telegraph Agency. We know several other worthy institutions who will make appeals for funds here. All of these institutions merit the support of the Toronto Jewish community. They are rendering service that is meritorious and necessary. But some means must be found of centrallizing or regulating these collections. These collectors always come to a few individuals who, if they yielded to the collectors' entreaties, could resign their positions or leave their businesses and do nothing but try to collect moneys. Some

COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi HARRY J. STERN, of Montreal,
Associate Contributing Editor

Guard Against a Hilul Ha-Shem?

"The School Question" debate is at its height in our community. And this is as it should be! A living community has its fights and combats. Communities that are lifeless, these have nothing to argue about. However in all our "Muchlokoth"—let it be "Le' Shem Shomayim." Let not one faction doubt the sincerity and honesty of the other. And above all else let us not rush into daily press, calling each other names. Let us safeguard the name of Israel.

A Distinguished Visitor

In Montreal there is at present a distinguished Palestinian—David Yellin. Cultured Jews, Jews who are in touch with Jewish life certainly know of the name and fame of Yellin. He is without a doubt the leading Jewish Arabic scholar and has been a wonderful Jewish ambassador to the Mohammedan community in the near East. Dr. Yellin is here in the interest of the Teachers College of Jerusalem—an insitution so close to his heart. I do trust the local community will extend more than the formal hospitality to this distinguished visitor, gentleman end scholar.

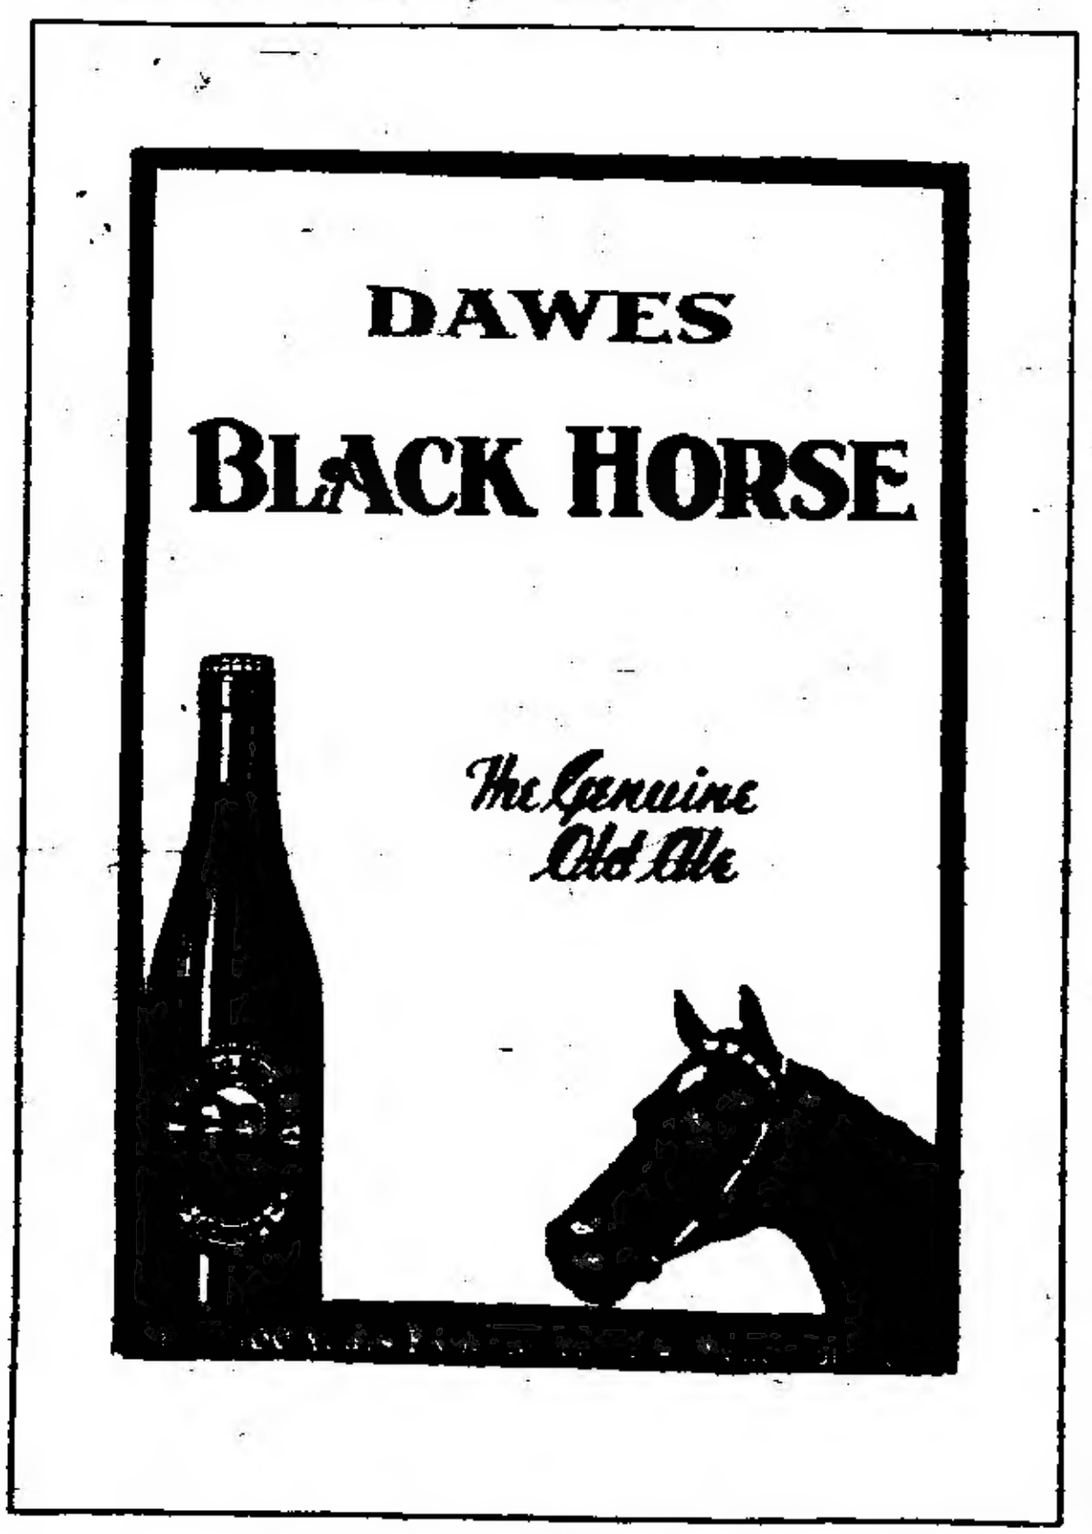
"A Way of Life"

Dr. William Osler, once delivered an address to Yale students on the above topic. It's a wonderful message and ought to be read by all. I merely quote the introductory poem.

Listen to the Exhortation of the dawn!
Look to this Day!
For it is Life, the very Life of Life.
In its brief course lie all the
Varieties and Realities of your Existence:—
The Bliss of Growth,
The Glory of Action,
The Splendour of Beauty;
For Yesterday is but a Dream
And Tomorrow is only a vision;
But to-day well lived makes
Every Yesterday a Dream of Happiness,
And every Tomorrow a Vision of Hope.
Look well therefore to this Day!
Such is the Salutation of the Dawn!

Judaism and the Modern World

The American Reform Jewish Congregations will hold their thirty-first Biennial Council Meeting at San Francisco on February tenth to the fifteenth. An important theme of discussion will be, "Can Judaism Survive in the Modern World?" I am happy to see that Liberal Jews are bold enough to ask such a question. I trust that our Conservative Brethren will not place the "ban" upon the "reformers" who dare to question so much about Judaism. But isn't real life best represented by a question mark rather than a period?



IN MEMORIAM

Neumann.—In loving memory of our dear Sylvia, who departed this life on Jan. 31, 1926.
We mourn for her,
But not with outward show;
For the hearts that mourn sincerely,
Mourn silently and low.
—Inserted by Mother, Father, sisters and brothers.

In memory of our sister Esther Richstone, who passed away February 4, 1925.
This day brings back a loved one
gone to rest,
And those who think of her to-day
Are those who love her best.
Sister and brother, Mamie and Hyman Nemeroff.

In loving memory of our darling mother, Anna Goldman, who died February 5, 1920. Kind and happy memories of you will stay with us forever.—Eva Laing and Sylvia Goldman.

Shalinsky:—In loving memory of our daughter Fanny, who died February 2, 1917.
The month of February again is here
For us the saddest of the year
Her memory is as dear to-day,
As in the year she passed away.
Mother, Father, sister and brothers.

Richstone:—
In memory of our wonderful mother Esther, who died February 4, 1925.
'Ever faithful ever true,
Divine jewel that was you,
Our everlasting love a burning ember.
We shall not forget to remember.
—Gerry and Abe.

In loving memory of our dear sister, Esther Richstone, who departed this life on February 4, 1925.
We shall not forget you, never, never,
Until our eyes are closed forever.

JUDGE ADDRESSES SOCIETY

Perjury in the local criminal courts today is the rule rather than the exception, Judge Amedee Monet, of the Court of Sessions, said Sunday, January 26, in an address delivered in the Mount Royal Hotel under the auspices of the Dufferin Educational Society. "It's my experience as a Judge, at least, that the witness who tells the truth is a rarity," he told his hearers.

He did not include the Jewish people when he referred to an epidemic

New Residence for Harry Bronfman, now in the course of construction
J. Gillotz & Co., General Contractors — Perry & Luke Architects

The Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, Stanley Street, is for sale.

The Decarie Blvd. bearing was opened at the old Court House on Wednesday, January 17, before Adrien Beaudry, K.C., Chairman of Public Service Commission. Prominent lawyers, clergymen of several denominations, contractors, engineers, business men and others filled every seat available. The evidence brought forth by a few experts was attentively listened to and many of those present took notes for future reference. When Notre Dame de Grace was annexed to Montreal in 1909, the widening of Decarie boulevard was specifically mentioned. After 20 years of apparent indifference, the question was brought to the attention of the City Council and credits were voted for this purpose. The boulevard will be widened from Sherbrooke to Brillox streets.

Among realty transactions is that of the old City Hall of the town of Maisonneuve, sold to H.M. the King, for $100,000.

A large transaction was that in which J. Gersovitz sold to Hon. R. O. Grothe, et al, es-qual., lot No. 278-56, city of Westmount with buildings (Whitehall Apartment), bearing the civic No. 400, fronting on Kensington avenue, for $317,500.

Mrs. C. I. de Sola sold to A. Raginsky, lot No. 169, St. George ward, measuring 60 by 90 feet, with buildings, bearing the civic Nos. 34 to 40, fronting on Craig street west, for $45,000.

Jacobs Investment Corporation sold to J. E. Tremblay, Ltee., lot. No. 22-85, city of Outremont, measuring 6,706 feet, without buildings and fronting on Maplewood avenue, for $6,000.

B. Kuperman sold to A. Kligman lot No. 498-2, St. Jean Baptiste ward, measuring 1,975 feet, with buildings, bearing the civic Nos. 4248 to 4252, fronting on St. Urbain street, for $1,800.

The Jewish Advocate, of Boston, Mass., in its issue of January 17 ran an editorial most of which was taken from the Review without giving this paper credit. The editorial in question was written by Rabbi Isserman, of Toronto, on the subject of Charles M. Henderson's bequest to the Holy Blossom Synagogue. There are a few editors too busy to remember to give credit. They are characterized by the fallacious belief that the world is a large place. But it isn't. Rabbi David Goldberg, of Temple Israel, Brockton, Mass., wrote to the Review about the Advocate's misbehaviour saying: "It is in self-protection that I call your attention to this rank plagiarism. Please note that my editorial connection with the Advocate lasted only one year (1925) and that I gave it up because of the unethical practices of its publishers."

Yehudi Menuhin, the eleven-year-old virtuoso, has press agents and managers to guide public opinion concerning him just as other artists have. These managers want you to know that: "One of two engagements was abandoned especially to meet Yehudi's innocent desire to hear two great artists he admires, Giesecking and Heifetz, in New York, an opportunity he would have to miss should he have had to play out-of-town. Yehudi's musical education is stoically and uncompromisingly pursued without the least regard for the incidental big fees Yehudi can earn from his concerts, or any financial consideration of any nature. In fact the very eight to ten annual engagements planned for Yehudi as a program to be followed the next three or four years, are primarily and essentially considered by Yehudi's parents only from the standpoint of what they consider a necessary experience with the public. It is their intention to see him grow and develop not as a tender-footed phenomenal hot-house budding flower, but as a natural plant that can stand and thrive on wind as well as sunshine."

And that's how dumb the managers want the public to be.

In telling the Review about a charity dance given lately by a certain Jewish girls' club of Toronto the news contributor related what had been done with the take. "The first act of charity which the club attended to," said the writer, "was to send the Jewish Children's Home two gallons of ice cream which was donated to us by the City Dairy." Charity, sweet charity! In the name and with a flourish!

Last week Rabbi F. M. Isserman, of Toronto, respected colleague of this column, said that "Despite the verbal lambastings that Reform Judaism receives from time to time from Orthodox and Conservative pulpiteers the influence of Reform or Orthodoxy is clearly apparent. Conservative synagogues are committing most of the so-called sins of the Reform. Let the rabbis continue their attacks from the pulpits. Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery and Conservative Judaism is vindicating Reform." This column wants to agree sympathetically. It has seen auxiliaries become sisterhoods and men's clubs grow where there were no men's clubs before to say nothing of major crimes such as men and women worshipping together under roofs where this had once been taboo.

Rabbi Isserman says Conservative Judaism is vindicating Reform. More than that it is merging with Reform. Orthodoxy, Conservatism and Reform do not run in parallel lines without overlapping at the edges. The Orthodox line is rapidly blurring with the Conservative line which is edging upon the Reform. The Conservative and Reform need each other. In very recent years Reform rabbis have been heard to hanker for old ceremonies and to admit the grave error of shedding all of an old skin too suddenly and too completely. Reform talks often now about the beauty of ceremonials. Without these things it is denatured, chilling. Conservatism alone can bring back to Reform some of the quality of that old-time flavour too good to lose. It takes no prophetic eye to see that some day before so very long Reform and Conservatism are going to lay the same corner-stone and assume the same mortgage. f.f.c.

Editor,
Canadian Jewish Review,

The following was inspired by the article written by F.f.c. in the "every friday" column:

The viewpoint expressed in the article in "every friday" on the subject of the Christmas Tree was of sufficient interest to call forth an attempt on my part to refute it. It appears to me that at the very outset the writer did not sufficiently evaluate the importance of any one ceremonial in the life of a people to further its interest in the matter of religion. Especially on the undeveloped child mind does a ceremonial object make an impression, often more lasting than the adult can comprehend. The child easily forgets incidents experienced during the formative years of his life, but it is surprising to note just how vividly the ceremonials connected with the religious life of his parents are retained in memory. Once having asked the "four questions" at the Seder Service or vigorously wielded the "gragger" during the reading of the Scroll on Purim, and especially when these are repeated year after year, the adolescent very easily can pick out these happenings in after years. In fact, it is not too much to presume that they are the only memories of his childhood days to which he attaches any importance.

The retention in the mind of the child of incidents of this nature is, perhaps, in direct proportion to the enjoyment he has derived from them. The Seder Service originated with that purpose in view—to satisfy the child's natural curiosity as to the meaning and aim of such an occasion—and by using this simple technique to contribute to his enjoyment the child learns, as the years pass, the important significance of the Passover. The same line of reasoning naturally can be used to explain the existence of the "gragger" and the countless ceremonials connected with our religious festivals.

It is an established truth that the decorating of the Christmas tree and the giving of gifts were the outgrowths of a custom used by many primitive peoples. In fact, most of the modern religious ceremonials have been traced back to heathen origin. But what the aforementioned article fails to state is the importance attached by the participators in these ceremonials at the present time, as viewed from a religious point of view. I doubt very much the insignificance attached to the Chrismas Tree, as the article would have us believe. Just as the Jewish child asks the meaning of the Seder Service, it is highly conceivable that the Christian child does the same with regard to the Christmas Tree. And there is only one possible answer to that question—the Christmas Tree is one of the methods used to celebrate the virgin birth of Jesus.

Can the same answer be given to the Jewish child? Undoubtedly, no, since all educators advise against the teaching of facts to the child that are open to criticism. It is much easier to discuss the precepts of religion with the adolescent than with the child. Shall the child be told that the Christmas Tree is merely a sign of the holiday season that is then prevalent? Again, such an answer is inadvisable, since he asks the reason for the holiday. Or, if this be not the case, he will hear his Christian playmates express what they know about the reason for the holiday—and here we have one of the calamities of the social order, doubt and criticism of the teachings of the parent. Naturally, it is difficult to resolve the existence of Jesus and the Christian religion with the precepts of the Jewish faith, and satisfy the child-like curiosity as to the reasons for the existence of both. Such teachings are best left until the stage when the child can accept, what to the unthinking mind are, absurd and unfounded principles.

That many people of our orthodox faith today have Christmas Trees in their homes merely for the pleasure of their children is inconceivable, unless borne out by proofs, which unfortunately were not supplied. And, perhaps, not as many orthodox Jews are the hypocrites the article would have us assume they are. Broadly speaking, once the orthodox Jew departs from the precepts of his religious group he is no longer orthodox but Reform. Then, if he does not admit this, his hypocrisy is evident—but even this hypocrisy is not sufficient excuse for the Christmas Tree. The Reform Jew—undoubtedly to the surprise of many—is interested in the welfare of his religion as a whole, in a better world Jewry. And even the Reform Jew is vitally concerned when dangers in the preservation of Judaism are encountered.

As a form of celebration during the holiday season, the Christmas Tree is one of the contributing factors to the difficulty of explaining the Jewish religion to the child. It is not the factor, but it would be folly indeed to disregard anything of the nature we deplore. The "delicious thrill" that the article mentions may have far-reaching consequences. Were the Jews living in a land entirely rid of religious bigotry and missionary activities then there would be no danger in using the Christmas Tree as a form of popular entertainment, but entirely free of its religious connotations, which must necessarily be present under the circumstances described.

But again, I refer to my previous thesis, that most ceremonials have a religious aspect. There is no harm in using a tree during a Chanukah entertainment, but unfortunately, although last year was the exception rather than the rule, Chanukah and Christmas are so close to each other to keep an evergreen tree absolutely free of the religious spirit prevalent during Christmas. After all, a ceremonial object has no value unless its basic reason can be appreciated. And it is much more appropriate and much easier to explain the use of the Chanukah candles than that of the tree.

Again the article does not stress sufficiently the decline of the Christmas festival in modern times. The Maccabean victory, Judas, the complete overthrow of the Syrians, the rededication of the Temple all were of vital importance for the continuance of the Jewish religion. But their significance has been lost today, perhaps due to the close proximity of the Christian celebration and the age old desire of our fathers not to imitate the heathen even as regards a holiday celebration. A rebirth of the original Chanukah festival, as a means of keeping alive interest in the Jewish religion, would be considerably retarded by the use of modern gentile ceremonial objects.

The danger, then, of the Christmas Tree in the Jewish home is two fold: the embarrassment of the parents in their inability to effectively explain its presence; and the deterioration of or giving a false note to our own Chanukah celebration, until its significance would be entirely lost.

Thanking you, I am

Yours very sincerely,

Percy P. Nussbaum.

It Came to Pass That——

—By Dr. Cecil Roth, of London, England, fellow of the Royal Historical Society.

FEBRUARY 2ND

David Reubeni begins his career, 1524.—At the end of January, there arrived in Venice, on a ship belonging to Messer Santo Contarini, a swarthy undersized Jew in Oriental costume. Members of the Venetian community soon got wind of his coming, and sent to the house where he was lodging, where they found him immersed in prayer. In response to their enquiries, he informed them that he was the brother of Joseph, King of the tribe of Reuben, and that he had been sent on a mission to the potentates of Europe to request their assistance against the Moslems. It would appear that this was an elaboration of a perfectly genuine errand on behalf of the Jews of Cochin. In any case, the Venetian community credited his tale completely, and provided him with the means of continuing his journey. Thus, a short time afterwards, he was able to enter Rome riding on a white horse, and presented his requests to the Pope himself at the Vatican. This was the beginning of a meteoric career which imposed to a certain extent even upon the kings of Spain and Portugal, and aroused Messianic hopes throughout Europe to a high pitch of expectation. It ended, however, in a dungeon of the Inquisition, or perhaps in an auto-de-fe.

FEBRUARY 3RD

Jews re-invited to the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, 1740.—From Sicily itself they had been expelled in 1492; from Naples, shortly after the Spanish occupation, at the beginning of the sixteenth century. In the eighteenth century, however, an endeavour was made by Charles of Bourdon to restore the languishing trade of the kingdom by bringing about a re-settlement. The invitation, promulgated on February 3rd, 1740, in thirty-seven articles, guaranteed complete freedom of worship and of settlement, in spite of a number of restrictions conceived in a mediaeval spirit. The experiment, however, ended in failure. The populace was antagonistic to a degree. Only about twenty families settled in all, from Holland, England, and Leghorn: and they found conditions so unpropitious that they were speedily reduced to three. In consequence, the new charter of liberties was cancelled after little more than six years, and the few remaining settlers were again expelled. These manifestations of intolerance seem to have left their impression on the mind of the Jewish people, here as in Spain: for even to-day, in spite of the removal of all restrictions, there is only one single community in the whole of the south of Italy.

FEBRUARY 4TH

Execution of 'Jew Suss', 1738.—The brilliant novel recently written about this remarkable person has recalled attention to the real romance of his career. Joseph Suss Oppenheimer was born at Heidelberg in 1698, being the son of Issachar Susskind Oppenheimer, the leader of a wandering troupe of players, and of Michele, daughter of Rabbi Solomon, Hazan at Frankfort. He was left an orphan early in life; but the business acumen which he soon developed secured him a high appointment in the financial administration of the Palatinate. Subsequently, through the medium of Isaac Simon Landauer, he made the acquaintance of Prince Carl Alexander of Wurttemburg, and became keeper of his privy purse. When the latter succeeded to the Duchy in 1733, Oppenheimer became his confidential adviser, and the financial administration passed almost entirely into his hands. Ultimately, he became Privy Councillor of Finance, and displayed incredible ingenuity in the invention of fresh modes of taxation, which weighed upon the people with increasing severity. Not the least cause of his unpopularity was the infiltration of Jews into the Duchy under his regime and the lightening of the restrictions upon them. Repeated protests and intrigues on the part of his enemies failed to shake his position; but ultimately he thought it best to leave the country. The Duke summoned him to Ludwigsberg to spend the last night with him, but suddenly died on the same evening. Oppenheimer was arrested, and, after an attempt to escape, was condemned to death. Though in his youth he had caused general scandal by his open violation of Jewish practices, he stoutly refused to change his religion, though had he done so he would probably have escaped. On February 4th, 1738, he was hanged amid the rejoicing of thousands of people upon a specially prepared gallows, with the Jewish confession of faith upon his lips, and in the following year the Jews (who had been arrested with him) were expelled from Wurttemberg. His execution is now admitted to have been little better than a judicial murder.

FEBRUARY 5TH

The Damascus Affair, 1840.—Father Thomas, a Sardinian subject, and superior of a Franciscan convent at Damascus, disappeared with his servant. The French consul, notoriously an enemy of the Jews, persuaded the Governor to institute an investigation in the Jewish quarter, where the friar was a familiar figure, and a sort of confession was extorted by torture from a poor Jewish barber, to the effect that a ritual murder had been meditated. In consequence of this, seven of the most notable members of the community were arrested and put to the torture. One died under his sufferings, and one apostasised: and the governor, taking the words that had escaped from the others in their agony as a confession of guilt, applied to Mehemet Ali for permission to execute the culprits. In the meantime, several other members of the community were thrown into prison, including sixty children, who were kept without food so that their sufferings might induce their parents to confess. One Jew who protested against the accusation was beaten to death. The populace fell upon one of the Synagogues and pillaged it. A general massacre seemed imminent. When the news reached Europe, public opinion was deeply stirred. A meeting of protest was held at the Mansion House in London, and Sir Moses Montefiore proceeded to the East with Isaac Cremieux and Salomon Munk on behalf of the Jews of England and of France. In consequence of their intervention, Mehemet Ali recognized the innocence of the accused men, and ordered the release of the survivors: while the Sultan issued a firman declaring the accusation of ritual murder to be malicious and absurd. It was the Damascus Affair which led to the foundation of the Alliance Israelite Universelle, and to the first effective intervention of the London Board of Deputies of British Jews in foreign affairs.

FEBRUARY 6TH

The First auto de fe, 1481.—The Spanish Inquisition had been established by a bull of Sixtus IV in 1481: but it did not begin its activities until two and a half years later, when six men and women were burned publicly at Seville for Judaising. This was the first of a long series in the Iberian peninsula and its colonies, said to number nearly 2,000 in all, the last being as late as 1826. The number of victims in Spain alone has been reckoned at 31,912 burned in person (not all alive) and 17,659 burned in effigy. Yet, in spite of all these horrors, crypto-Judaism has been able to survive in the Peninsula until our own days, and the descendants of the victims of the Inquisition are now returning to the faith of their fathers.

FEBRUARY 7TH

Disputation of Tortosa opens, 1413.—The Anti-Pope Benedict XIII, hoping to secure his position at the forthcoming Council at Constance by the general conversion of the Jews, compelled the communities of Aragon and Catalonia to send their representatives to a discussion upon their religion at the city of Tortosa. The debate which followed was under his own presidency, and was among the most noteworthy of the middle ages. It lasted a year and nine months, and was spread over sixty-nine sessions. The protagonist for the Church was the apostate Geronimo de Santa Fe. The Jewish representatives included Joseph Albo, the philosopher: but Don Vidal Benveniste was chosen as spokesman, by reason of his good acquaintance with the Latin tongue. We are told how, in recognition of the solemnity of the occasion, his colleagues agreed to forego the Jewish privilege of interruption. However, the result of the discussion was a foregone conclusion, as the truth of Christianity was postulated to be beyond question, and any fair debating reply on the part of the Jews would immediately be characterised as blasphemy. Its only tangible consequence was therefore the publication by the disappointed unusual severity, forbidding the Jews even to study the Talmud.

FEBRUARY 8TH

Complete Jewish Equality in France, 1831.—The Revolution had marked the end of most Jewish disabilities: and the results of Emancipation had been so successful that after the Restoration there was no excuse for reaction in this respect. Almost the only differentiation left was that the Jews had to support their own ministers of religion, whereas those of the Catholic and Protestant churches were supported by the State. A motion to put Judaism on terms of equality with other officially-recognised religions in this respect was passed by the Chamber on November 13th, 1830, by a large majority: and, after it had received the approval of the Upper House, it was ratified by Louis Philippe on February 8th, 1831. This arrangement remained in force until the disestablishment of all religions in France at the beginning of the present century.

"Certified Baby"

Many delicate babies and invalids depend upon City Dairy "Certified" Milk for health than upon any other. The reasons are:

1. Our "Certified" is the Department of Health of the City of Toronto.
2. Our leading doctors have found it the most reliable milk and have been prescribing it for nearly twenty years.
3. It comes from our own farm at New Lowell. Every can is guarded, sealed and certified right at the farm. That's why it is direct.

Phone Kingsdale 4151 regarding delivery of this milk.

In Isaac Berkson, who was appointed the educational director of the Zionist schools in Palestine, appeared before the meeting of the principals of the various schools and declared that he accepted the position only on the condition that the Zionist organization pay the salaries to teachers punctually and that the back salaries due to them since 1927 be liquidated. Since the salaries have not been paid regularly this year, he is compelled to relinquish his post. He will however, remain active in the board without bearing the official title, because he realizes that the Zionist Executive is doing all in its power to fulfill its obligations. The responsible head of the Bureau of Education will continue to be Miss Szold. The teachers sent an ultimatum to the Executive that unless their salaries are paid they will not return to the schools after the mid-winter vacation.

"We have a new phone number"!

The recent change in our phone number has caused some confusion because parties have been dialing LO instead of LL. Remember, LLoydbrook — with the double-"ell" dial letters. If you have not phoned yet to ask about our five different ways of doing family wash, do so. You will find one of these services exactly suited to your requirements and the prices of all of them extremely moderate. No marking, no starching, and each wash done separately in soft water.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming, and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

For free copies write G. A. ELLIOTT, Director of Colonization, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario.

Editorial

First there is the right of free speech. It is rather late in the day to have to discuss, in a British Country, the elementary principles of free speech. British democracy recognizes that the integrity of the individual must always be respected. Society has certain accepted notions dealing with a variety of subjects. The individual has a right to scrutinize these notions in the light of his own God-given capacity for understanding life. In the relationship between the individual and society there is an understanding that society in exacting the obedience of the individual is not to employ its powers over him arbitrarily or oppressively, and in return it demands from the individual that in disagreeing with the ideas of the majority, he shall not be offensive or oppressive. Society grants him latitude in thinking without using force to compel conformity. Reciprocally he may be allowed to use moral or intellectual suasion against society, but he must desist from using physical force against society. In other words, society gives fair treatment and protection. The individual must, in disagreeing with society, use fair methods, and abstain from violence such as is employed in revolutions.

Now in England the sturdy common sence of the people recognizes the implications of the understanding between society and the individual, and allows minorities full freedom to disagree with and criticize the majorities so long as no violence is attempted. Thus there is the institution of Hyde Park. Individuals and minorities are permitted to criticize any of the institutions or standard notions of society, to their hearts' content. So long as they attempt no violence society refrains from resorting to violence itself. Even communists are permitted to harangue their doctrines add libit. The sensible Englishman treats them indulgently. They are human beings. They have their pet notions. They are entitled to express their notions. They cannot hurt anyone by their talk. When they will attempt to act, then it will be time for society, which is much more powerful than they are, to act against them.

There is the other basic right which the police ordinance is violating —the right of people to use their own language.

We recognize that all people have a right to live. Now the living people on this planet consist of a variety of types. One type has as much right to live as another. Each type has certain organic characteristics, which mark it off from the other types. One of the peculiarities of a type —group, class, race, nation—call it what you will,—is its mode of expression. A type or group that has a right to live has a right to use its characteristic modes of expression or language. The world is interesting because there are varieties of types and varieties of languages.

The proposition therefore is this: If you allow a person to live, you must allow him to live in a way that he may be true to his own nature. If you force a man away from his own language in which his soul is most at home, you denature him. If Canada were to erect a Chinese wall around itself and keep away all non-English influences, then it would have no occasion to enforce unilingualism in this country. But so long as it lives as a nation among nations, it will have to respect the rights of all peoples who live within its borders to be true to themselves.

Free speech—natural expression to these every human being has an inalienable right. It is only in an extraordinary emergency that constituted authority is justified in interfering with them. Does such an emergency exist here in Canada?

We submit that such an emergency does not exist. In England where the people have genuine traditions of freedom and liberty ingrained in their very nature, they are very hesitant about tampering with the basic rights of free speech, and natural expression. In England Communism is more of a threat than it is in America. England is in Europe, and thus more exposed to continental influences. England is in the throes of an economic depression. Her people are therefore more apt to be won over by Communist doctrines. Still England is loyal to her ideals of freedom, and is tolerant of dissenting teachings. England is the most remarkable nation in the world—the greatest, the most admirable nation in the world. England has built a great empire, is gaining strength when other empires are diantegrating. Is not its humanism, its inborn love of freedom, its capacity for appreciating other people and their points of view the secret of its greatness.

In Canada, unfortunately, while professing loyalty to British traditions, the people have been evincing a tendency to follow the ideals of the country to the south. Instead of imitating the serene and broad minded attitude to life of the English, Canadians are adopting the way of the Americans, bombastic, hysterical, arrogant, extravagant.

Why should Canada be afraid of the Communists? We have a rich, prosperous country. The people are contented and happy. There are a handful of malcontents. They admire the Russian system. Let them admire Russia. They have no influence here. If Canadians treated the strangers within their gates with the same spirit of generosity as they did—say fifteen or twenty years ago, the nervous tension on the part of the "foreigners" strangers—would disappear, their bitterness would melt away, and they would be happy, loyal citizens. It is the atmosphere of suspicion and ill-will, which the strangers now find surrounding them, which intensifies their feeling of loneliness here, and drives them to romanticizing about the imaginary beauties of the old lands. A bit of the old fashioned friendliness on the part of Canadians towards the strangers, who come here, anxious to make good in this country, would cheer them up and arouse in them feeling of appreciation for Canada and its institutions. Let Canada not go back on its finer traditions of British freedom and British hospitality, and treat its strangers with respect and courtesy, and Canada will find in the "foreigners" good material for loyal Canadian citizenship. Some agitators there may always be, but they will have no followings and no audiences.

method must be devised whereby a fund could be raised annually so that Toronto Jewry might contribute its proportionate share to deserving outside enterprises, and yet avoid these weekly and weakening campaigns. Some such step must be taken else the goose that lays the golden eggs might cease to perform her functions.

FELIX FULD

Felix Fuld, of Newark, N.J., a distinguished Jewish communal leader and a member of the firm of one of the world's finest department stores, L. Barnberger and Co., died a few days ago. Mr. Fuld was in many ways an exemplary leader. His generosity knew no creedal boundaries. For to Jewish and Christian causes he worked with enthusiasm. Though he held no official position in the city, public institutions put flags at half-mast as a tribute to him. Mr. Fuld led in all communal events, and received the honors which his work merited from all groups.

But Mr. Fuld, though he won the respect and recognition of his Christian fellow citizens, never forgot his Jewish contacts. He led in the Y.M.H.A. movement in New Jersey, and is largely responsible for the splendid Newark Y.M.H.A. He gave a half million dollars to the Jewish hospital in Newark. He contributed large sums to European Jewish relief. He recognized the responsibilities of wealth, and sought to administer his resources in the interests of humanity. His memory will be blessed.
